COMMUNITY SHELTER PLAN STUDY FOR WASHINGTON, D.C.

COG LIBRARY

VOLUME I.
PLAN STUDY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

June 1965

B. Sample Instructions for the Public

The Threat: RADIOACTIVE FALLOUT

When a nuclear bomb is detonated, the debris from the explosion contains radioactive material that can be lethal if exposure to it is prolonged.

Fallout is not like a gas which penetrates all areas. It is more similar to snowfall or particles settling after a dust storm.

A mass of material between you and the fallout, such as a heavily constructed building, can serve as protection.

The Protection: COMMUNITY FALLOUT SHELTERS

Community fallout shelters offer the most effective protection against lethal radioactive fallout. To provide for the sheltering of a maximum number of people during an emergency, the Office of Civil Defense has developed an emergency warning system, an emergency communication system, and a system of community fallout shelters, which are marked and stocked with emergency provisions and supplies.

You should become familiar with location of these facilities in order to protect yourself in the event of nuclear disaster.

Your Warning: CIVIL DEFENSE SIGNALS

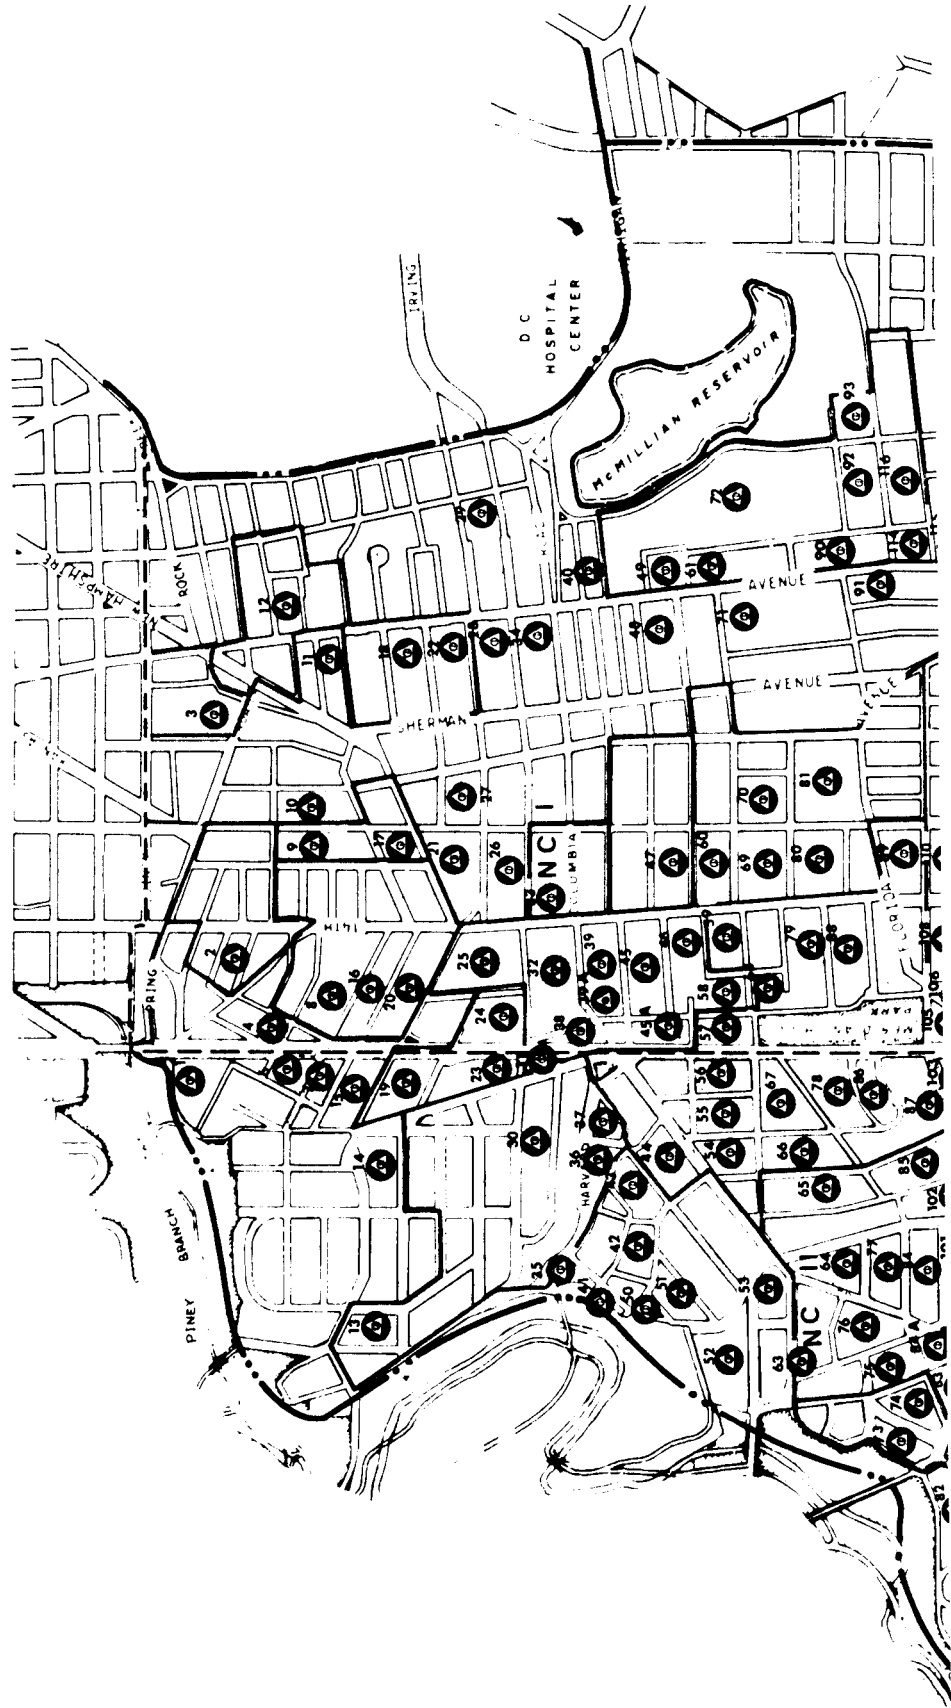

There are two siren warning signals.

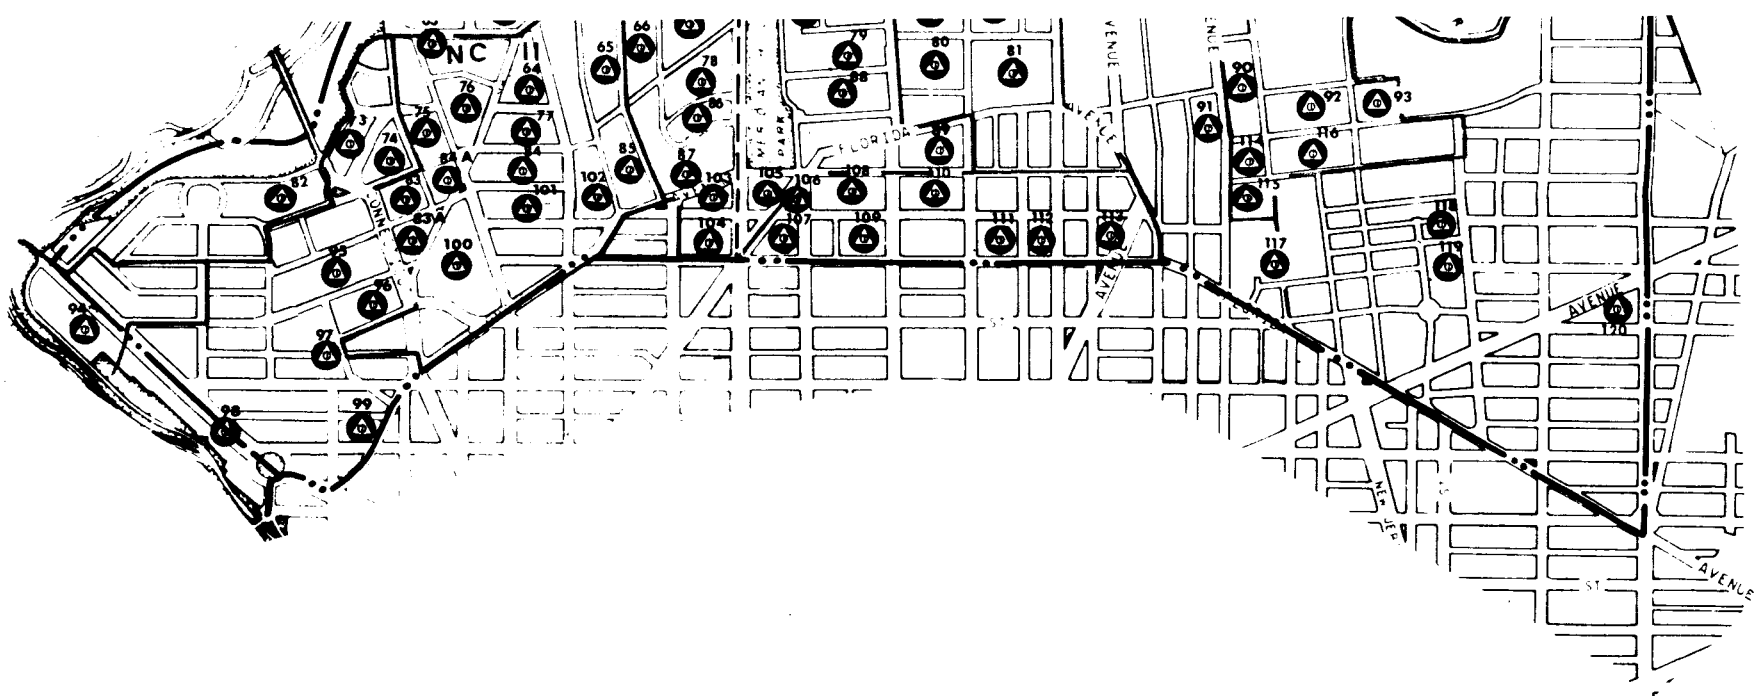

1. Alert - a steady blast of 3 to 5 minutes. This means attack is probable and you should begin to move toward fallout shelter. Proceed according to the District of Columbia Shelter Plan. This map shows one of the 16 sections of the Plan. A general plan for the whole city may be found in the yellow pages of your telephone directory.
2. Take Cover - a wailing tone or short blasts for 3 minutes. Attack is imminent. Take cover immediately in the best shelter available.

Further Instructions: EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

The Office of Civil Defense maintains an emergency radio broadcast system which will be the main source of information during an emergency. All other broadcasting stations will go off the air. Civil Defense will broadcast over local radio frequencies.
